ACSI BRIEFING

On 26 August, at the request of ACSI, a presentation on CIA and the intelligence community was given to six MI reservists. This is the last of four such groups who have come during the summer. The men were intelligent, enthusiastic, and had many questions to ask. Two of them, Lieutenant Colonels, are language teachers; two of the younger ones are students at Stanford. One of these expressed an interest in working for the Agency and was told about the JOT program. Major Lloyd Jones, the ACSI escort for these groups, said he hoped similar arrangements for CIA briefings could be made next summer.

CIA INTRODUCTION

On 25 August this program was conducted for 67 persons.

MISCELLANEOUS

After the ACSI briefing, one of the Lieutenant Colonels asked if the Strategic Intelligence School were an intelligence community enterprise. He was surprised that it was not (not in theory at least) because of the number of CIA people involved. He also spoke of the general high regard for the Agency speakers who lecture there.

[redacted] is having a rough time to set up all the arrangements for the War College tour, and also write a draft for Gen. Cabell. As of 7 hrs. a.m. he had everything but the draft under control, & was making progress on that.
